The Porto Design Summer School, led by an international team of experienced graphic designers and educators, is about to embark on its 8th edition. We welcome design students at the beginning of their journey and experienced professionals, who are looking to expand their outlooks and take a break from their routines.

We're looking for graduate and post-graduate design students, professional designers, and in general for people who have a passion for making, exploring, testing themselves and sharing with others.

Applications are open and should be made through the Porto Design Summer School website. The deadline for applications is Sunday June 5th.

The course sets out a practical outcome for participants in the form of an individual editorial project that develops personal interests. The aim is to expand technical and conceptual skills and move people closer to finding a unique outlook and signature as a graphic designer.
